The Well Balanced Motor Car

An automobile is just as strong as its weakest unit. The service rendered depends largely upon the relationship of one part to another. Of what use is the powerful motor if the clutch is bad? Or a good clutch if the transmission is not correct? Or a good transmission if the driving shaft is weak? The relationship of one part to another must be scientifically correct. The ideal car, too, must be of medium weight, insuring longer life to tires and full economy.

Part Played by Upholstery

NOMFORTABLE cushions are necessary, but yet are merely an incident in modern body construction, and their size is determined by the style of body and the purpose for which the car will be used. We have furnished bodies in which the cushions were 15 inches deep, and again in which they were only 6 inches deep. The height from the floor, the pitch to the rear, the upholstery of the sides and back, are just as important parts of the design as cushion depths, and these measurements can only be obtained from the individual who is to ride in the car.

The custom in New Jersey has been to issue each year license tags done in the colors of some educational institution within the State. Princeton, Stevens and Rutgers have had this distinction in turn, but the yellow numbers on a bine plate for 1912 puzzled not a few folks. These are the colors of the State Normal School at Trenton.

If New York State were to adopt the college color system there would be combinations ahead for years to come, what with Columbia, C. C. N. Y. N. Y. U. St. Francis Xavier, Fordham, Manhattan, Cornell, Syracuse, Hobart, Hamilton, Colgate, R. P. J. University of Buffalo and Alfred University, to name just a few. Probably the State of Ohio could do even better than that.
